

Farm fear duo back in business

A brother and sister duo who were nearly thrown off their family-run farm are back in business as they prepare to start selling meat once again.

Tenant farmers Charlotte and Ben Hollins, children of Arthur Hollins, were in danger of losing the 140-acre Fordhall Farm in Market Drayton after it fell into disrepair and they struggled to meet rent payments.

But now they are again opening to the public once a week when they will be selling meat direct from the farm.

Lamb and speciality sausages are for sale and they plan to have bacon and pork joints in the near future.

Charlotte said: "We are keen for the local community to get involved and become a part of the project in whatever way they can.

"We want Fordhall to once again become the hustling friendly place it once was where everyone is welcome."

The launch will be on t Friday next week at 11am-7pm and Saturday 11am-

Opening Friday

5pm where there will be sausage-tasting and children will be able to see the farm animals.

They will also be promoting their new business at this years Taste of the Town exhibition and are hoping to enter into this year Deliciously Shropshire

A volunteer group has been formed called 'Friends of Fordhall' to help a the upcoming Fordhall Project which will see the farm turned into a visitor centre and tourist attraction.
